

Radiographer

Career of the week

What does a radiographer do?

- Medical radiography is the use of X-rays to view inside the human body. If you are interested in science and want to use your knowledge to care for people this may be the degree for you.

Radiographers assist in the diagnosis and treatment of disease, which calls for considerable technological and scientific expertise.

How do I become a radiographer?

Through CAO

- To become a diagnostic radiographer, you need to study Radiography (DN410) level 8 that is offered at University College Dublin

Graduate Entry

- Study Radiography Graduate Entry, DN 411 in UCD.

Radiography
University
College Dublin
DN410

Minimum Subjects 2 H5 & 4 O6/H7

Garda Vetting

O6/H7 in English

O6/H7 in Irish

O6/H7 in Any Other Language

O6/H7 in Maths

O6/H7 in Agricultural Science, Biology, Chemistry, Physics, or Phys/Chem

Radiography – Graduate Entry DN411

- If you will hold a level 8 honours degree in any discipline with a minimum award level of 2.2 you are eligible to apply for the graduate entry Radiography degree.

Where can I find more information

---

Caeersportal.ie

---

- Ask your teachers

---

Qualifax.ie

---

- Ask your guidance counsellors

---

Classroomguidance.ie

---

- Ask friends and family

---

Eunicas.com

---

---

Ucas.com

---

---

Careersnews.ie